

STRONG FAMILIES

All families should have the tools and support they need to forge strong relationships with their children and ensure their families' stability. When parents have access to the programs they need, they are better equipped to raise happy, healthy children.

Providing families with access to a wide range of supports effectively reduces parental stress and strengthens families by promoting resilience, social connection, concrete support in times of crisis, and knowledge of child development.

Research shows that when families opt in to receive visits from a trained professional during pregnancy and through the first few years of a child's life, they have the opportunity to learn positive parenting that improves life-long outcomes for their children.

Research shows that 10% of California families with very young children could benefit from home visiting, yet only 20% of those families have access to that support. We should expand access to all California families who need it.
